

“Everyone lives downstream and we have been trying to clean up Harrods Creek since we began managing the farm. We are at the headwaters of Harrods Creek and take that responsibility seriously. We have put acres and acres of land along Harrods Creek into federal programs that pay you to grow native grasses there— we pushed the cattle back so they didn’t have access to the creek.”

“We do not view ourselves as owners of this land. We are merely caretakers for the next generation of our family. We are guardians of this special place for both our family and for all the people of Oldham County. We hope to inspire others to think twice before developing their land. It can be saved and it should be saved. We hop to implement a business model that can be copied by others so that those who want to keep their farm can do so.”

Layla and Austin Musselman, Jr.